

Evansville Regional Airport officially opened in 1930. Today, it is an important component in the nation's aviation industry that offers over 40 flights a day to destinations around the country. With a focus on innovation and customer service, Evansville Regional Airport provides services that meet business and non-business air travel needs and is an effective economic engine and job producing catalyst for the community.

The Port of Indiana-Mount Vernon is located just 18 miles west of the Evansville Regional Airport. The airport has three runways and is equipped with an Instrument Landing System (ILS) providing precision instrument approaches. The passenger terminal provides 140,000 square feet of space and 10 carrier gates. The airport provides over 24 daily departures to six national hub-airport locations throughout the United States.
